Chrome River has just released the new Chrome River INVOICE, geared for managers, supervisors, and system administrators. They'd be able to quickly view and approve tasks on a device of choice, with seamless, mobile-first invoice management. Importantly, the solution simplifies processes for an oft-ignored face of large organizations, accounts payable (AP).

“The accounts payable team has long been overlooked as far as high-quality productivity solutions go. Until now they have relied either on paper-intensive manual processes or complex and unintuitive software tools,” commented Chrome River co-founder and CEO, Alan Rich.

And with INVOICE, he seeks to bridge the gap.

The company used the latest HTML 5 platform to build the tool, adopting a responsive web design approach. This gives INVOICE a uniform look and feel across devices, bringing the same elegance and sophistication through a simple web browser. With a coherent interface for all scenarios, users will be able to access all functionalities, no matter the device being used.

Vendor invoices can be tracked and ratified by the approving party, as well as accounts payable members. Further, access via portable devices like mobile, tablet, or laptop means administrators could make approvals and sign off on tasks even when they are away from their desk, or even the office.

Organizations can now expedite the invoice approval process, letting them tap into supplier program benefits such like pre-payment discounts.

Rich believes INVOICE will unlock all new levels of responsiveness and ease-of-use: “With Chrome River INVOICE, AP administrators now have access to the same caliber of solutions as their colleagues elsewhere in the enterprise, and approvers will love how it easy it is to view and approve invoices on any device.”

Finally, the INVOICE dashboard offers end-to-end visibility of all invoices in one, single snapshot. AP teams can not only view approval progress, but also use the search feature to zero-in on a specific invoice, based on attributes. INVOICE brings the intuitive experience of Chrome River EXPENSE into the billing and spend management space.
